414 1878 Standard Dollar. Morgan's original design. Wings of eagle broad, and laurel branch consisting of three small leaves. On the regular issue the wings are badly clipped, the branch consists of three three-pointed leaves, &c., &c. This pattern is of great rarity, the die being destroyed, and no specimens have been for sale at the Mint. Silver proof.

415 —— Standard Dollar. Barber's rejected design. Obv. A very creditable female head. ℞ Eagle, copied from the French Imperial copper coinage. Silver proof, extremely rare, none being for sale at the Mint. See engraving on cover.

These patterns form but another leaf in the disgraceful story of the mismanagement of the United States Mint. In other countries, the Mint is the centre from which numismatic knowledge emanates. In this country the Mint abhors numismatic interests. It serves to coin money, to be run as a political machine and to be abused by a certain class of its officials. It is a rule of the Mint, that patterns shall be sold only during the year of issue, but this year the sale of the Barber-Morgan dollars was refused by the Mint, while the officials, in a clandestine manner, sold these patterns at enormous prices. Patterns forming a part of the numismatic progress and the history of coinage of a country, should be sold by the Mint to numismatists in limited numbers. As long as this is refused, there will be fraud and disgrace.
